Shopping

There are "men things" and "women things" and often they make no sense to the opposite sex. Shopping is one of those things. Browsing, comparing, and discussing a store item makes so sense to a man who buys, not shops. He picks up the item he wants, pays for it, and leaves the store as quickly as he can. That, of course, makes no sense to a woman.

There's no better example of Women are from Venus; Men are from Mars than SHOPPING.

A woman who is sad, angry, or out of sorts can be healed miraculously by a trip to her favorite store.

Shopping is a Woman's Thing

The joy women find in shopping can be as big a mystery to men as cheering is when a boxer knocks an opponent unconscious is to women. Clichés are cliché because there's truth in them.

Book Excerpt

The Wake-Up Call

"I need a new t-shirt. The one I wore at the Tug of War got ripped."
 "Wonderful. I love shopping!"
 Stephen picked up a shirt at random.
 "This one will do," He announced. "We're outa here."
 "Oh, no! Not that one. It's all wrong for your skin tone and eye color."
 Stephen stared as if she'd dropped in from Mars. "What?" he stammered. "What does that have to do with anything?"
